Forecast for Friday 14 May 2021

Weather: Clear spells in the early hours then cloudier by dawn. Variable cloud during the day, with some low cloud affecting southeastern slopes but some sunshine inland, low confidence for the detail. Generally dry, with just the odd light shower.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 700m: 30% - quite a lot of low cloud drifting in from the Irish Sea but this could break over and to the northwest of the summits.

Visibility: Away from cloud, generally good, though hazy or misty just under the cloud. Very poor in cloud which will be broken to overcast at 300-600m in the southeast of the area, well broken at times to the northwest.
